

I strongly disagree with the massive costs involved both already spent and the amount being proposed for the building of the new hospital.

Looking logically at the proposals, it appears to make no sense to choose a site that will entail high costs and that will take a long time to be built.

Particularly since there is an ideal site available which has significantly better access roads, would provide space for parking and be in a pleasant rural location which would be beneficial for patients recovering. (St Saviour's site)

I am concerned that the Overdale choice has been politically motivated. Why else would the States agree to spending 804 million pounds?
