To answer your question in the JEP; YES I do want a supermarket.

It would only be a replacement for the old Safeway. The COOP and Checkers survived fine when that was in Jersey, competing with them.

Yes because I would like to get good value foods. Food is very pricey here and a new company may help drive down the cost of living. However, the costs to that supermarket will be a little higher than its UK equivalent so food may be priced-up.

Yes, so long as Tom Scott has nothing to do with it, nor any States member have a finger in the pie.
