DRAFT MARRIAGE AND CIVIL STATUS (AMENDMENT No. 2) (JERSEY) LAW 200-

European Convention on Human Rights

In accordance with the provisions of Article 16 of the Human Rights (Jersey) Law 2000 the Minister for Home Affairs has made the following statement –

In the view of the Minister for Home Affairs the provisions of the Draft Marriage and Civil Status (Amendment No. 2) (Jersey) Law 200- are compatible with the Convention Rights.

(Signed) Senator W. Kinnard

REPORT

This amendment to the Marriage and Civil Status (Jersey) Law 2001 allows parents to choose the surname of their children, selecting either the maiden surname of the mother, the surname of the father or a combination of the two. This applies both to parents who are married to each other and to parents who are not.

Where the two parents do not jointly make a choice of one of the above options, then the default position prevails, as follows. When parents are married to each other the child is registered in the surname of the father. When parents are not married to each other the default is that the child takes the maiden surname of the mother.

This legislation is of social importance. The Home Affairs Minister received several representations from parents who wish to register their children as set out above but who are currently prohibited from doing so. This will enable them to choose either the maiden name of the mother or the surname of the father or a combination of the two in the order chosen by the parents.

Other jurisdictions have different rules which vary across Europe. In England and Wales and Northern Ireland parents may choose any surname they wish when registering the birth of a child although parents are discouraged from choosing surnames that differ from either that of the mother or the father. In contrast there are different approaches elsewhere in Europe. Thus, in Switzerland a child of a married couple can only take the father's surname.

Whilst the English approach has simplicity there are important public policy issues to be considered, in that in England the surname chosen could be unrelated to the surname of the father or the maiden name of the mother. In some circumstances this could cause embarrassment to the child or others particularly in a small community. The amendment to the Marriage and Civil Status (Jersey) Law 2001 has been prepared on the basis that the surname of the child should be linked to the child's mother or father.

A number of European jurisdictions impose restrictions on the parent's right to choose a surname. The English approach is at one end of the European continuum. The European Court of Human Rights has considered the Swiss approach in the case of GMB and MK v Switzerland (27th September 2001). In that case it was decided that the prohibition on the child of a married couple taking the mother's surname was compatible with Article 8 – the right to respect for private and family life – and Article 14 – the right not to be discriminated against. This proposed legislation will adopt a middle position, giving parents freedom of choice to choose a name linked to one or both of them.

The proposed amendment has been under consideration since before the matter became the subject of a court case. The case of Moran and Kemp v Deputy Registrar for the Parish of St. Helier ([2007] JRC 151) is of importance because it does highlight the need for the amendment, although at first instance the court ruled against the parents application for review of the Registrar's decision and revision of the register entry.

The amendment is to be retrospective to 1st May 2002 when the Marriage and Civil Status (Jersey) Law 2001 came into force.

The opportunity has also been taken to make a minor amendment which reduces the number of working days between a request for a marriage licence and the marriage being solemnized.

Financial and Manpower Implications

It is not possible to estimate how many parents might wish to take advantage of this amendment; however, the costs of additional staff and resources would be met by the Parish of St. Helier and be offset by a re-registration fee. The precise re-registration fee will be discussed with the Connétable of St. Helier before the amendment comes into force, but it is likely to be in the region of £50.

European Convention on Human Rights

Article 16 of the Human Rights (Jersey) Law 2000 requires the Minister in charge of a Projet de Loi to make a statement about the compatibility of the provisions of the Projet with the Convention rights (as defined by Article 1 of the Law). On 15th April 2008 the Minister for Home Affairs made the following statement before Second Reading of this Projet in the States Assembly –

In the view of the Minister for Home Affairs the provisions of the Draft Marriage and Civil Status (Amendment No. 2) (Jersey) Law 200- are compatible with the Convention Rights.

Explanatory Note

Article 1 defines the Marriage and Civil Status (Jersey) Law 2001 as the “principal Law”.

Article 2 amends Article 11 of the principal Law so as to reduce from 3 to 2 the number of working days that must elapse between a person requesting the issue of a marriage licence and the marriage being solemnized.

Article 3 inserts Article 59A in the principal Law.

59A Surname of child

Paragraph (1) introduces a new entitlement for the father and mother of a child, jointly, to register a surname for the child other than the surname required by the default rules. The choice is limited to the father’s surname, the mother’s maiden surname, or a combination of the two, such as Wilson-Jones or Jones-Wilson. If the parents are not married, the father must be recorded in the register as the child’s father in order to join in the registration of a surname under this paragraph.

If the parents do not, jointly, make a choice under paragraph (1), the default rules as to the surname to be registered for a child are as follows –

- a child born to a married couple is registered with the father’s surname
- a child born to parents who are not married to each other is registered with the mother’s maiden surname.

Article 4 inserts Schedule 2A in the principal Law.

Schedule 2A Re-registration of surname of child

This Schedule allows the parents of a child whose birth was registered on or after 1st May 2002 (the day that the principal Law came into force) but before the new Article 59A comes into force to jointly request the re-registration of the child’s surname in accordance with paragraph (3) of that Article.

Article 5 provides for the citation and commencement of the Law.
