

I have an honest and reliable tenant in one of my flats - single man, jersey born and resident here for 45 years.

He earns 250 per week window cleaning and receives full rent rebate of approximately 96 per week. Even though his circumstances have not changed AT ALL he has been told that he will no longer qualify for income support by way of rent rebate and that he must find the whole of the rental of 197 per week plus bills himself.

This needs explaining and, in my view, reversing.

My interest is that potentially I am going to lose an honest reliable and excellent tenant.

However, this man does not deserve to be treated this way. A response from Soc Sec would be interesting
