Good Morning

I am writing to you with regards to the possibility of the states providing 20hrs nursery care for 3 to 4 year olds.

I currently have a 2 and a half year old daughter at a fee paying preschool as I have to go to work. The school I am sending her to has not got a preschool attached to it, so therefore it would mean moving her next year to a states preschool in order for me not to have to pay fees.

I do not feel that it would be in her best interest to move her to a states preschool for a year to then have to move her to another school a year later.

This would be too unsettling for her.

I would really like to keep her where she is as she is very happy there, but why should I have to pay for her education for the year, that she could be getting free if she was attending a states preschool.

I look forward to any comments that you may have and do hope there is a positive outcome to this situation.
