

The Design of Homes

The current policy dictates that new build replacement area in the country is reduced by 25%. In order to make a scheme viable developers may have to squeeze as many small units as possible onto the reduced area, which appears to be the case in many new developments. There is also a lack of consistency in applying this policy.

Yours faithfully
David Pennington