Report

The principal purpose of this draft Law is to remove an anomaly in the powers of the States to annul subordinate legislation.

If a Law states that the Subordinate Legislation (Jersey) Law 1960 ('the 1960 Law') applies to subordinate legislation made under it, the effect is that the subordinate legislation must be laid before the States and the States has power to resolve to annul it, at any time after it is laid. All Laws passed since 1960 which include a power to make subordinate legislation have applied the 1960 Law.

However, most Laws enacted before the 1960 Law have not been amended so as to apply that Law. Instead, they contain express provision requiring subordinate legislation made under them to be laid before the States and empowering the States to resolve to annul it - but only if the resolution for annulment is passed within 21 days after the subordinate legislation is made.

Consequently, most subordinate legislation made under Laws enacted before 1960 may only be annulled within 21 days after it is laid before the States, whilst subordinate legislation made under Laws enacted from 1960 onwards may be annulled at any time after it is laid before the States.

There is an explanation for this discrepancy. When the 1960 Law was enacted, it also provided that a resolution for annulment must be passed within 21 days of subordinate legislation being laid before the States. Accordingly, there was, at that time, no need to consequentially amend earlier Laws so as to apply the 1960 Law, since the earlier Laws had the same effect as the 1960 Law. The discrepancy arose in 1976, when the 1960 Law was amended with the effect that subordinate legislation to which it applied could be annulled at any time after it had been laid, but the earlier Laws were not similarly changed at the same time.

The Committee has concluded that it cannot have been the intention, when the 1960 Law was amended in 1976, that different powers of annulment should apply to different subordinate legislation and commends that the anomaly should be removed.

Explanatory Note

This draft Law further amends the Subordinate Legislation (Jersey) Law 1960 (“the principal Law”).

The amendments of other Laws made by paragraph 1 of the Schedule added to the principal Law have the effect that subordinate legislation made under those Laws henceforward may be annulled by resolution of the States at any time after it is laid before the States. Currently, such legislation may be annulled only within the period of 21 days after it is laid.

The opportunity is taken to amend the Motor Traffic (Jersey) Law 1935 and the Civil Service (Administration) (Jersey) Law 1948 so that all Orders made under those Laws must be laid and may be annulled by the States at any time after they are laid. These amendments appear in paragraph 2 of the Schedule added to the principal Law.
