- Lower prices to consumes, not enough competition, local business have had the chances to make money at the expense of islanders, for example they could sell a loaf of bread for less than £1 and still make a profit, we are being ripped off, there needs to be a happy medium, there isnt it is just all expensive
- customer choice will be increased, Safeway is poor quality and badly laid out shopping experience, Checkers is expensive and not much choice other than the basics Co op is fine. If moving forward makes jersey a clone UK town then so be it, however the island can move forward and keep its own identity, if it wants to.
- new jobs will be created in the supermarket, if local business are forced to cut staff if they can not make themselves profitable then the staff can apply to the new supermarket!
- the town centre will always be the town centre, a supermarket wont change it.
- but we need useful,well priced retail, not more upmarket and designer shops.

I love jersey the way it is apart from the cost, we dont get paid anymore here to cover the cost of living, why is everyone scared of a little competition, that never hurt anyone.
