AMENDMENT

and renumber the paragraphs in Article 2 accordingly.

REPORT

Background

The Teachers' Superannuation (Jersey) Law 1979 makes provisions in relation to pensions and other similar benefits payable to, and in respect of, teachers and certain other persons employed in connection with the provision of educational services. Changes are required to the existing legislation to give effect to the former Education, Sport and Culture Committee's in principle decision to align teachers' benefits to Jersey public sector pension benefits.

Proposed Amendment

Following the implementation of ministerial government, the States Employment Board become the legal employer of all States' employees, except certain office holders, such as the Police and those posts referred to in the Departments of the Judiciary and Legislature (Jersey) Law 1965. Prior to 2006 the Education, Sport and Culture Committee was the employer for teaching staff in Jersey.

Conclusion

As the States Employment Board is administered by the Chief Minister's Department a further amendment is required to the Teachers' Superannuation (Jersey) Law 1979 to allow for the definition of Minister to be that of the 'Chief Minister' rather than the Minister for 'Education, Sport and Culture'.

Financial and manpower statement

There are no additional financial or manpower implications arising from this amendment.
