I believe each Parish should assess how many people, at present, are residential. Obviously, St. Helier, would account for a large number. At least, I think this would provide the main body of the population of Jersey. And, it should be on that result that additions and subtractions should be worked out.

I believe that we should not let our population exceed 100,000, whatever the circumstances, the ideal would be 95,000.

Best of luck with your equations.
